

Instructions:

The Graduate Studies Unit requires that scholarly work conducted by graduate students and incorporated into theses be made publicly available. Graduate students own the copyright to their original works of authorship while granting UDST a nonexclusive, worldwide, royalty-free, perpetual license for dissemination of their thesis.

By filing this form, a student may request an embargo to temporarily delay the public release of their thesis for the reasons mentioned in this document. If the embargo request is approved, the delay period will expire 12 months from the student's official degree conferral date. Should an embargo extension be needed, the extension request must be received by the Graduate Studies Unit at least one month before the expiration of the initial embargo period.

Students applying for an embargo must still submit their work for assessments as per their college requirements.
